The 'High-Speedway Program' is a 10-year, $1.5-billion highway program authorized under the 1992 Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA). The program is designed to improve the nation's highway system by providing federal funding for a variety of transportation projects, including highway construction, maintenance, and safety improvements. The program is administered by the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and is subject to annual appropriations by Congress.
